AUCKLAND'S IDEA OF WHAT THE AMERICAN FLEET WILL LOOK LIKE.

The above picture appears in a New Zealand paper and has a footnote as follows: "Coming visit of the great American fleet to Auckland: An idea of what its appearance will be-H. M. S. Powerful and ships of the Australasian squadron at anchor in the Waitemata-Some small idea of the majestic appearance which the great fleet of American battleships will present when at anchor in Auckland harbor may be gained from the above picture, especially when it is considered that any one of the battleships is considerably larger than H. M. S. Powerful."

MARINE

Although the day was generally observed as a holiday, the waterfront was busy yesterday until well into the afternoon. The work of discharging the Hongkong Maru kept things going all of Friday night and the early aring kept up the movement along the the other, and who is to pay will prob- ports, 2 p. m.

The arrival and departure of the two liners were of more than usual interest to the police department, as the plainclothes men were in evidence in force at the Hongkong Maru and Aorangi. They were looking for a soldier from Fort Shafter who is thought to be rived here yesterday morning at 7:30 wanted in California for the theft of some jewelry and a marine from Camp Very who is a deserter.

The Inter-Island steamers arriving caused their usual little ripple of excitement. This morning the Niihau will sail for Kau to load sugar, both Honuapo and Punaluu warehouses be-

The crew of the racing yacht Hawaii under the direction of Captain Harris are getting the little vessel into shipshape condition rapidly. She is affoat again after a final scraping and painting on the marine railway, and several alterations to her rigging and tackle have made her handler for the men. It looks as if she still had a little too much ballast aboard, and although it has been trimmed and she is higher
